I analyzed Shopee's homepage by breaking it into three main sections: header, main content, and footer.
The header contains the Shopee logo, search bar, shopping cart, notifications, and user account options,

The main content is where most of the action happens. It includes promotional banners, flash sales, personalized product recommendations, and trending categories. The layout is designed to grab attention and encourage shopping with product grids and interactive features like countdown timers.

The footer has important links like customer service, policies, FAQs, and app downloads. It also includes social media links and payment options for convenience. Breaking the page into these sections makes it easier to understand the layout and plan for coding in future projects.
